

POPE MAY NAME NEW CARDINALS

Early Consistory Expected to Fill Depleted Ranks of Church

O'CONNELL ARRIVES

Newspaper Declares He Took 2-Million Dollar Donation From America to Rome

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Creation of two new American cardinals is expected to be one of the ecclesiastical acts of Pope Pius XI, the new Catholic pontiff. In hierarchical circles here, the church, however, expressed that an early consistory of the sacred college would be called at Rome for the express purpose of naming at least ten candidates for the red hat.

Cardinals Thinned Out.
Ranks of the cardinals have become greatly thinned due to the failure of the late Pope Benedict to call a consistory since he died a year ago and to the deaths of several of the high prelates of the church, notably those of Cardinal Ferrari, of Milan; Cardinal Sant'Agostino, of Rome; Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore.

It is highly probable, it was said, that the new consistory will call a majority following his coronation, due to the presence in Rome of the majority of the cardinals.

Three Leading in U. S.
Slated for the red hat among the prelates of the church in the United States and whose names have been repeatedly in the forefront as candidates for the highest order of the Roman church, it was said, are:

The Most Rev. Archbishop John Joseph Glendon, of St. Louis; the Most Rev. Archbishop Edward J. Hanna, of San Francisco; and Metropolitan of the Pacific coast, the Most Rev. Edward J. Hanna, of New York. The names of Archbishop George W. Mundelein, of Chicago; and Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, also are mentioned frequently in circles familiar with the plans and workings of the Catholic church in America, are not considered likely candidates at this time.

Archbishop Glendon, of St. Louis, is outranked in point of seniority by Archbishop Sebastian G. Messmer, of Milwaukee, Wis., who was consecrated in 1892, while Archbishop Glendon was consecrated in 1896. Ranking after Archbishop Glendon, is Archbishop Alexander Christie, of Portland, Ore. The senior bishop in the United States is the Right Rev. M. F. Burke, of St. Joseph, Mo., who was consecrated in 1886.

Bonzano Sure to Land.
No doubt is entertained in hierarchical circles as to the creation as cardinal of the apostolic delegate to the United States, Archbishop Giovanni Bonzano. Monsignor Bonzano was to have been one of the first to be presented with the red hat at the next papal consistory of the late Pope Benedict XV. It was stated by prelates close to the papal legation here today.

Precedence has not failed to make every apostolic delegate to the United States a cardinal following his term in this country, rated one of the most important of the high ecclesiastical appointments.

Seventeen million Roman Catholics in the United States are known to be eager for the appointments of two more cardinals. It was said in high church circles today.

ROME, Feb. 7.—Pope Pius XI will not only continue the policy of the late Pope Benedict XV for reconciliation between the papacy and the Italian state but also will lend the powerful assistance of the papacy towards the reconstruction of war-torn Europe. It was learned today from an authoritative source.

Coronation Sunday.
The selection of the former archbishop of Milan for the chair of St. Peter will be a popular one, attested by the flood of congratulatory messages that are pouring into the Vatican from all parts of the world.

The coronation will take place on Sunday. It being the tradition of the Roman church to conduct the coronation on the first holy day following the papal election.

The ceremonies will take place in St. Peter's and theistine chapel. There was keen disappointment that Cardinal O'Donnell, of Philadelphia, arrived just too late to participate in the final ballot of the conclave. The American cardinal entered the conclave at 2:40 o'clock Monday afternoon and was received by Cardinal Gasparri. The conclave was not officially dissolved until 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

O'Donnell Took Two Million.
It was reported by the newspaper La Tribuna that Cardinal O'Donnell brought $2,000,000 representing American contributions to St. Peter's. Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia and Cardinal Begin, of Quebec, are due on Friday. They will be in time to take part in the coronation rites.

Knickerbocker Construction Bad.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Construction of the roof of the Knickerbocker theater, the collapse of which on January 25 took a toll of 97 lives, is not in accordance with the architect's plans, Robert Henry Davis, engineer and computer in the District of Columbia building inspector's office, informed the coronator's jury here today. The plans, he said, had been changed.

Smallpox Quarantine Lifted.
OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 7.—The smallpox quarantine against Leffroy county since January 19 was lifted today by Dr. A. R. Lewis, state health commissioner upon receipt of a letter from Dr. Harrell Hardy of Poteau, county health officer, saying there had been no new outbreaks recently.

Drug-Crazed Film Queen May Have Killed Taylor

early hours of the morning. These tales were verified in the heat of the winter. The tales of the drug peddlers, among whom the secrets of the state that shine on the celluloid firmament are every day. They know it as part of their infamous trade.

Many Women in His Life.
The associations of Taylor and the woman were widely known to Hollywood circles. That is what may be called their daylight life. Hollywood did not even raise its eyebrows. There had been too many women in Taylor's life.

They did not know about her early morning visits to Alvarado street. They might have wondered at who she took upon as a queen of the delirious revels where ether and cocaine were blended with morphine and opium, left these "parties" at an hour considered early in Hollywood. But they were used to strange behavior.

There was a bit of gossip when it was learned that the young woman, in a burst of drug-inspired confidence, had boasted that she intended to marry "Bill" Taylor.
"He's mine," she said, "and he knows it."
Hollywood smiled tolerantly.

On New Year's eve and far into New Year's day the advent of the fresh year was hailed in Hollywood with a wild and drunken shout. Outdoors, hereabouts, say that the celebration in its wildest surges surpassed anything ever seen in these parts. Out of it have since grown twenty scandals and domestic shipwrecks.

She and Taylor Quarreled.
Taylor and the woman who boasted that she would marry him quarreled violently at the "parties" they attended. So violently that they separated on the spot. Half-crazed with the drug she had taken, the woman ran in a rage to her car and drove to her home. In the morning, according to the dope peddlers—remember that was a part of their trade—she repented and telephoned Taylor.

At last he shook himself together, formally bade farewell to the others of the party and stalked to his car. When he reached home, according to the stories the police heard from the dens of the dope peddlers, he broke down and wept. When daylight came he was off on one of his solitary walks into the foothills. He returned just before the woman telephoned. He refused to go to the telephone when he learned who it was. Later, it was stated, she made several efforts at reconciliation.

"And that night—"
But Taylor was through with her. There had been other women in his life. There still were. He was seen in their company in public. With them he went to "parties" in private studios; friends of the actress sought to confront her with gossip about Taylor's carryings-on with other women. Then came the night of Taylor's death—the night that Mabel Normand, once reported engaged to him, visited Alvarado street. That night, as they say in movie subtitles, the film queen was again at a "dope" party, morose and embittered, according to police information. To her came one of her consulting friends.

"What a fine dumbbell you are to be crying about that fellow," she said. "Why, he's got a woman in his house right now."

"That's a lie," cried the star.
"All right," said the other, "but if I wanted to, I could tell you her name."

For more than an hour, according to the information given the police, the young woman, who had boasted she would marry Taylor, brooded. Then without a word to anyone she left.

police broke in, shouting that this woman, with the fumes of the drug fanning jealousy to flames, armed herself and went to the home of Taylor ready to demand his love and to kill him if he refused. And it was upon this that they were at work today.

partly out of power never wants to give credit to the party in power for its accomplishments.

"Tulsa's traffic cops are showing a high degree of efficiency," he remarked. "They are keeping us from killing each other as we drive through the streets—and with Tulsa's narrow streets and the great number of automobiles here this is no easy job."

Reason for Nonpartisanism.
O'Connor expressed in strong terms his dislike of the practice of district judges and other judges in attending and taking active part in political conventions. "These people are elected to office because of politics," he stated, "and yet they are the ones who pass on our guilt or innocence."

M. C. Spradling declared he is "against any independent party," which might easily be taken to indicate he is opposed to the nonpartisan election amendments. That the republican party "win every office from governor to justice of the peace this year" was the expressed opinion of F. E. Nelson.

"I am anxious that the republican party put up men that we can honor and respect and in whom we have perfect confidence," observed Mrs. Lila D. Landers. "We want men for whom we will have more respect when they retire than we had when they took office. But who ever goes into office, let's get behind them, who need."

And he added, "let's not criticize them before there is something for us to criticize."

are for the coming of fall American participation. Sentiment in cabinet circles, however, is strongly against even this.

The strong belief exists in quarters close to the white house that President Harding is seeking a "peaceful way" out of the Genoa situation without offending either the European governments who sponsor it, or the interests in this country who are strongly in favor of American participation.

BLOC WINS NEW VICTORY
Senate Decides to Send Henry Ford's Contract to Agricultural Committee.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The "agricultural bloc" scored another victory in the senate today when at the end of an hour's debate Henry Ford's offer for the government's Muscle Shoals, Ala., property was referred to the senate agricultural committee.

A resolution offered by Senator Fletcher, democrat of Florida, which would approve the Ford contract for the lease of Muscle Shoals as submitted to congress by Secretary of War Weeks and would authorize and direct the latter to carry out its provisions, was also sent to the committee.

The senate's action was by a viva voce vote.
